The fashionalle wedding of Tuesday was that of Miss Emily illard Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fordham Morris, to R. Horace Gallatin, which was cele-brated at roon in Trinity Chapel. Of the bride and her bridesmaids it will be difficult to speak in too high praise, and the decorations of the church were high praise, and the desorations of the church were in extremely good taste and most effectively ar-ranged, both in the chancel and in the body of the The floral embellishments were all of white and green, except on the altar, where there were several vases filled with long-stemmed Amerian Beauty roses. Mr. and Mrs. Gallatin will sail on Wednesday next in the steamship Majestic for a six months' trip through Great Britain and Continental Europe. They expect to return to New-York in November. Wednesday was a rather busy day with weddings

In the afternoon at 4 o'clock, in St. Bartholomew's Church, Miss Lilla A. Thorne, daughter of Mr. Mrs. William Thorne, was married to James Blackstone Taylor. It is not too much to say that a more beautiful wedding was never seen in any church at this time of the year. There was scarcely a break in the kaleidoscopic effect of color from the altar to the vestibule, and the decorations were the most magnificent and lavish seen here this season. The pews in the middle aisle were decked with huge plumelike, tall, clusters of daisles, and every pew from the door to the chancel was abloom with white roses, white orchids and daisies. The chancel, water roses, write oremes and daisies. The matter, too, was filled with great masses of daisies and white roses, the former predominating. The marriage ceremony was accompanied by some effective chord music, rendered by the vested choir of the chora music, rendered by the vested choir of the church. The bride presented a most attractive appearance in her gown of ivory satin, which was misked at the corsage with a broad girdle of pearls and a draping of point lace. Her point lace veil, which was arranged well back on the head, was manned with a single crescent of diamonds. At her thrat she wore, a large circle of pearls and diamonds. The bridesmaids, Miss Catherine S. Leverth, Miss Marguerite L. Winslow, Miss Sarah A. Hard, Miss Ingersoll, Miss Thompson and Miss Hard, presented a pretty picture in their costumes of while dotted organdie over silk, trimmed with of white dotted organdie over slik, trimmed winarow ruffles and broad sashes of striped gread white satin ribbon. Large white ostrich plum tere used to dress their white hats, and each canded large bouquet of Marguerites. Miss France D. Archbold, the maid of honor, wore a gown pure white, modelled after those worn by the bride maids. She carried a bouquet of Marguerites at pink rose buds. Immediately after the ceremon which was performed by the Rev. Dr. J. Houste by the Rev. Dr. David H. Greer, the rector of Sarbholomew's, there was a reception at the hon of the bride's parents, in West Fifty-third-st., which several hundred guests were invited.

A pretty home wedding on Wednesday was cele brated at noon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Thurber, No. 4b West Twenty-fifth-st. The bride was their youngest daughter, Miss Marianne Blakenan Thurber, and the bridegroom Francis Lansing Pruyn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis S. Pruyn, of Albany. Only the relatives and a few intimate friends had the privilege of witnessing the marriage ceremony, which was performed under a Anopy of apple blossoms by the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, of the Madison Square Presbyterian ras served by Pinard. Miss Thurber made a beau-ful bride in her gown of white satin and point lace. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss leaneste M. Thurber, whose gown was of white sails, draped with white mousseline de soie. George 8. Griscom, jr., of Pittsburg, was Mr. Pruyn's best man. There were no ushers. Some of the guests at the wedding and breakfast were Hishop and Mrs. Henry C. Potter, Mr. and Mrs. Francis S. Pruyn, parents of the bridegroom; Mrs. John V. L. The second annual bicycle tea in aid of the Burnham Industrial Farm, which was held yesterday afternoon at Claremont, on the Riverside Drive, was a decided success. The atmosphere was much too cool, however, and the different booths, instead of being on the lawn, were obliged to find a place on the glass-inclosed veranda. During the afternoon there was music on the lawn by the band of Troop A. Hundreds of bicycle riders, besides several hundred persons in carriages and afoot, came to the entertainment to contribute their share to the success of the affair. The flower booth, beautifully decorated, was in charge of Mrs. George De Forest Mrs. Oliver Harriman, jr., Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart, Mrs. Herbert Harriman, Mrs. W. FRANK WORK BUYS A PLACE IN NEWPORT. Newport, R. I., May 2 (Special).-Frank Work, of New-York, is the latest addition to the list of Newport cottage-owners, his purchase of the Bellevus-ave, property of Mrs. Christopher R. Roberts, of New-York, having been announced to-day. This estate is situated nearly opposite the Ocean House on the corner of Bowery-st. It includes about 136,600 square feet of land, measuring nearly 700 feet on the avenue. The buildings consist of a large house, a stable and a gardener's cottage, all of brick, and extensive frame greenhouses. The place was for many years the property of Mrs. Frederick W. Stevens, of New-York, who was afterward the Duchess De Dino, and it was in former days the scene of many notable entertainments.

M'EINLEY'S RECENT TRIUMPHS.

THE PEOPLE AGAINST THE BOSSES. From The Albany Argus.

It is evident that the masses of the Republican party are in favor of McKinley's nomination. It is still more evident that the politicians of the Repub-lican party are opposed to it. On a popular vote Mc-Kinley would be nominated with ease.

LIKELY TO WIN ON THE FIRST BALLOT.

From The Baltimore News. With the victory won by McKinley in the Vermont convention, the probability of his carrying the St. Louis Convention on the first ballot has been greatly increased.

THE VICTORY IN VERMONT.

From The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Vermont's declaration is likely to be more important in its moral influence than it is even in its physical effect. That State's four delegates at-large and four district delegates are only a small part of the men to sit in the St. Louis Convention who will be swayed by it. As a victory in the domain of his most powerful rival, this indorsement for McKinley will have a powerful effect in all the States which are yet to express their preferences. From The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

PROTECTION WINS IN THE WEST.

From the Chicago Inter Ocean. The demonstration in the Illinois Republican convention yesterday when instructions for McKinley were adopted was a testimonial that any candidate might be proud of. The magnificent demonstration and the heavy vote in his favor show what a strong hold the champion of protection has on the Republicans of the West.

UNUSUAL ENTHUSIASM.

From The Buffalo Enquirer. From The Buffalo Enquirer.

The enthus asm for McKinley is something unusual in politics, and it is clearly a popular sentiment; in no wise fostered or influenced by the managing politicians. He seems to be strong among Republicans everywhere, and even where no movement has been organized in his behalf the party managers have the greatest difficulty in making way against him. Manifestity the Republican masses like the man, and sike the opinions that he represents.

HIS NOMINATION ASSURED.

From The Providence Journal. Even allowing, however, that the present McKinley strength is really only 351, we still cannot avoid the conviction that his nomination is already practically assured. With the tide running so strongly in h s favor as it is at the present moment, and in view of the natural desire of many men to get on the winning side, it is altogether probable that he will find it a comparatively easy task to get the less than a clear majority of the whole convention.

THE DRAMA.

LAST APPEARANCE OF MR. HARE. Mr. Hare closed his engagement last night at Abbey's Theatre, again presenting the gentle and lovable character of Benjamin Goldfinch in "A Pair of Spectacles." A numerous audience gave' their earnest attention and hearty plaudits to this exceptional performance. At the end of the play Mr. Hare was called before the curtain several times, and he expressed his thanks and said farewell to his American friends in these words:

Ladies and Gentlemen: I trust that you will not for one moment suppose that I can, with these brief remarks, express my gratitude to you. Tonight is a sad night to me, for when I remember so much kindness, to say farewell is a sad and painful task. I arrived here at a time of great excitement. Yet I was received with sympathetic citement. Yet I was received with sympathetic kindness, not only in this city, but wherever I have appeared, and it is difficult to find words in which to thank you for your generous treatment of my associates and myself. I cannot forget that here in New-Tork I was first welcomed.

"I take this opportunity of publicly expressing my thanks to the management of this theatre for the kindness and consideration with which I was treated during my recent illness.

"I look forward with eagerness to the honor of again acting before you, and I hope to be with you next year. I hope I shall not be forgotten, and I shall never forget your kindness."

THE DRAMATIC WEEK.

As the dramatic season draws toward its close it is signalized by several events of unusual impor-tance. Mr. Hare, at Abbey's Theatre, took leave of New-York audience last night. Miss Ada Rehan and her associates of the Daly Comedy Company left the city yesterday for St. Louis, Kansas City Omaha and San Francisco. Mr. Jefferson and his star company are to appear at the Fifth Avenue Theatre on Thursday in "The Rivals." Signora Duse has ended her season and will depart, this week, for Europe. Minor performers, such as Mr. Lewis Morrison in "Faust." Mr. William Gillette in "Too Much Johnson," Mr. Wilton Lackage and Miss Blanche Walsh in "Trilby," and Mr. Robert Hilliard in "Lost-Twenty-four Hours," are to present them-selves in local theatres on Monday. The most important event is the re-entrance of Henry Irving. Miss Ellen Terry and their colleagues of the London Lyceum Company, which will be accomplished at Abbey's Theatre, and which will be emphasized by the production of a new play. Mr. Irving, since he left New-York on December 22 last year, has vis ited upward of twenty cities, and has been hailed with acclamation in all of them. His farewell engagement in New-York is limited to fourteen performances,—eleven in the evening and three in the morning,—and it is to end on Friday night, May 15. The plays that have been announced for it are "Godefroi and Yolande," "The Lyons Mail," "Macbeth," "The Merchant of Venice," "Louis XI," "King Arthur," "A Story of Waterloo" and "The Belis," "Godefroi and Yolande" is a new piece in one act, written by Mr. Irving's youngest son, Mr. Lawrence Irving, and thus far it has been but three times acted,—twice in Chicago and once in Boston. The principal part in it is embodied by Miss Ellen Terry. Fifteen members of the Irving company participate in the representation. ited upward of twenty cities, and has been hailed

STORY OF GODEFROI AND YOLANDE. Mr. Lawrence Irving's play relates to a mediaeval time and it aims at weirdness of character. The following is a synopsis of its contents: Yolande is a courtesan, in the time of Philippe, urnamed "Le Bel," King of France. She holds her court, and many distinguished persons are her followers. Godefrol, her clerk, a man of lowly birth, loves her, but she views him merely as a servant. The play opens on a night of storm. Without the castle all is wild, but within, in a spacious hall, the ruddy light from the fireplace and the gleam of torches make a scene of comfort. The attendants, preparing for a festival, are decorating the hall with garlands. Yolande calls aloud and often, and her lande is iii, and Godefroi has been sent for a doctor. A poor, blind woman, led by a child, enters the hall, These are the mother and sister of Godefrol. A loctor comes in and sings as follows:

Merry old skeleton, flesh underlying, Living or dying, Laughing or crying— Merry old skuil! Flesh may fail in, Old skuil still dath grin, Grin—Grin, skuil! grin—grin, skuil— Grin—Grin!

The maids watch him fearfully as he goes to the fireplace and brushes the snow from his garments. Rodefroi enters, and, seeing his mother and sister. tenderly, inquiring the cause of their coming. "To take you away from here, my son, the mother replies. Godefrol is summoned to Yo-lande's presence. The doctor and the attending women discuss her illness and Godefrot's infatuation, and Megarde, Godefroi's mother, who, being blind, fears not the doctor, as do others who see him, confides in him. The Pageant, or Masque, to be cele brated, has been written by Godefrol, and it is said by one of the waiting women that Philippe, the King, and the King's brother, the Archbishop, be present. A scene between Godefrol and King, and the King's brother, the Archbishop, will be present. A scene between Godefrot and his mother ensues, in which the former discloses his love for Yolande, but the mother conquers, and Godefrot promises to leave the scene of his infatuation. Yolande enters, queenlike, impetuous and cruel. She is uneasy at what she has learned from the doctor, and she vents her impatience on Godefroi, bidding him drive forth into the storm his mother and sister. Lepers come to the gates of Yolande's castle and she sends her menials to drive them away. Next comes Sir Sagramour, courier of King Philippe and the Archbishop, and in a conversation with the doctor, he shows that he understands the terrible plagues of the East. "And could you know a leper by the touch or look—say, of the hand?" asks the doctor. "Indeed, I could," replies Sir Sagramour. The Massue is now in progress, and Yolande appears as Venus. Sir Sagramour claims to kiss her hand, and the King and the Archbishop would follow him, when, just as Sir Sagramour is about to touch his lips to it, he gazes at her intently, cries aloud, rushes to the King and the Archbishop to prevent their approach to Yolande, and, amid a fearful tumuit, declares her to be a leper; whereupon the doctor cries out, "Aye! She is stricken with leprosy." The populace demand that Yolande shall remove her mask, and as she does so, she is anathamized by the King, the Archbishop and the people. All rush from her presence, except the despised clerk, who now avows his love. Yolande, gray garment, the badge of leprosy, and a bell which the lepers must ring, comes upon the scene and attempts to drive her out. Godefrod alone supports her. Yolande yields to him, and they depart together, while the curtain falls to the sound of distant volces of lepers crying, "Unclean! Unclean!"—which seems to be an apt comment on the subject.

THE COACHING CLUBS PARADE

TURNOUTS. DRIVING FROM THE METROPOLITAN CLUBHOUSE

UP RIVERSIDE DRIVE AND BACK-A LUNCHEON AND A DINNER. The twentieth annual parade of the New-York

Coaching Club took place yesterday, under rather unfavorable weather conditions. There was a dis-tinct suggestion of rain in the raw, damp atmosphere, but no rain fell, fortunately, and the parade passed off with considerable success and brightness, though there were only eight couches in Before the start was made the coachn guests enjoyed a sumptuous luncheon in the ladies' annex of the Metropolitan Club. The luncheon was served in two of the private dining-rooms on the second floor, the guests for each coach being seated at a small round table, which was decorated with spring flowers.

Long before the coachmen and their guests left the tables, Fifth-ave, and Sixtieth-st, and the open space in Central Park opposite the clubhouse began to fill with men, women and children, who were assembled there to see the start of the coaches. It was nearly 2:45 o'clock when there came the sound of the horn, and the first coach arrived and took its place in Fifth-ave., a short distance above the club-house. This was Colonel Edward de V. Morrel.'s coach, which was soon followed by Theodore A.

Havemeyer's and others. It was probably ten minutes past 3 o'clock, each coach having received its passengers, when Colonel William Jay, who had taken his place at the head of the line, gave the signal, and the parade of the Coaching Club started off on its trip to Grant's Monument, on the Riverside Drive. The coachmen were dressed allke, in olive green coats, with gold buttons and buff waistcoats. Colonel Jay drove his famous old Dorking coach, red and yellow. His leaders were a bay and gray, and the wheelers were brown and bay. Mrs. Jay shared the box seat with her husband. Colonel Jay's guests were Mrs. Richard Henderson, Miss Eleanor Robinson, Charles A. Munn and Gould Hoyt.

The next coach in the line was Theodore A. Havemeyer's, distinguished by its blue and white stripes It was drawn by four superb bays, and was driven by Charles F. Havemeyer, Mrs. Charles F. Have meyer, Miss Katharine Duer, Richard Peters and the Austrian Consul-General at New-York were the Ogden Mills's green and white coach was next in line. Before it were a pair of brown leaders and roan and chestnut wheelers. Mr. Mills had beside him on the box seat Mrs. Edmund L. Baylles. Other guests were Miss Anna Sands, Miss Blight, Hamilton W. Cary and J. D. Romon Baldwin. Frank K. Sturgis's black-bodied, yellow-wheeled

GRESHAM'S FINAL RESTING PLACE.

THE SECRETARY'S BODY BURIED WITHOUT OS-TENTATION IN ARLINGTON CEMETERY.

Washington, May 2.- The burinl of the body of the late Secretary Gresham this afternoon was devoid of any display whatsoever. The funeral party reached Washington by a train o Railroad at 4 p. m., and was met at the station by Secretary Lamont and his aide, Captain Barry, Mrs. Gresham and her son and daughter entered one carriage, and followed the hearse up Pennsyl vania-ave., through the White House grounds to Arlington Cemetery.

The President and Secretaries Olney, Carlisle and

Herbert and General Miles were walting at the

The body was lifted from the hearse by eight The body was lifted from the hearse by eight troopers from Fort Myer, and the little procession then wended its way through the beautiful grounds to the newly made grave in front of the old mansion on the brow of the hill, in close proximity to the monument to General Sheridan. Without ceremany, except the mounding of "taps" by a busiler, the body was lowered into its last resting-place and the party returned to the city. There was no military display.

Secretary Smith, who could not attend the burial, sent a wreath of ivy which was laid on the casket.

TOTS IN THE MINUET.

THE FINAL DANCE OF THE SEASON OF MISS ROBINSON'S CLASS IN NEW-BRIGHTON,

The final meeting of Miss Adeline Robinson's dance ing class for the season of 1893 was held on Friday afternoon at the Hotel Castleton, New-Brighton, Staten Island. The careful training of the sixty or seventy children present was made evident by their graceful dancing and good behavior. The dance was given in fancy costume, and many were the pretty dresses and different characters. The recep-tion committee was composed of three little missos, Elizabeth Pinney, Beatrice Birmingham and Caro

Brown.

The May-pole dance and the minuet were the features of the afternoon. The minuet was per-formed in the most approved style by eight boys formed in the most approved style by eight boys and eight girls, who looked like dainty miniatures of their ancestors. This dance was led in a most dignified and bewitching way by Miss Virgin a Arthur and Master Alfred King, Miss Dorothy Miller and Master Wisner Miller. The others who took part in the dance were Miss Gertrude Bonner, Miss Janette Charlier, Miss Nina Perry and Miss Jeannette Van Vechten, Miss Anna Carrère and Miss Jeannette Van Vechten, Miss Anna Carrère and Miss Jorothy Fearon; Elliot Chapin, Grosvenor Wright, Alexander Perry, Murray Arthur, Charlie Parmele and Philip Taintor.

The afternoon ended with a pretty cotilion and a grand march, headed by Louis Whitehouse and Charles Kenigen. The hearts of the children were made happy by he many pretty favors and the ice cream and cake.

THE ATLAS TACK RECEIVERSHIP.

Boston, May 2.- "The Herald" says that at the office of the Atlas Tack Company it is learned tha that the business of the concern has been rapidly increasing, both at home and abroad, requiring the use of a large capital, and that the reason for securing the appointment of receivers was that the principal stockholders and directors could not agree regarding the matter of securing this capital. Some stockholders did not wish to go on borrowing stockholders did not wish to go on borrowing money, but desired to have the capital stock increased and were willing to take the whole of the increased capital stock at $150 a share, the par value being $100, or to let the other stockholders have their proportionate share of the increase. This seemed to be a point upon which they could not agree. Hence the receivership. Assurance was given at the company's office that there could be no loss to the creditors under a proper receivership. After all the debts are paid there will be an entire reorganization. The corporation has been paying a dividend of 6 per cent right along.

SWEDENBORGIANS IN SESSION. Washington, May 2.- The seventy-sixth annual meeting of the general convention of the New Jerusalem, or Swedenborgtan, Church met in this city this afternoon, President John Worcester, of Newtonville, Mass, being in the chair. The convention will last until Tuesday evening. To-morrow the handsome new church of the society, in Six-teenth-st., this city, will be dedicated with imposing ceremonies, and in the afternoon a colored church of the same denomination will also be dedicated. The services at the dedication of the Sixteenth-st. edifice will be largely in the nature of a jubilee celebration of the fitteenth anniversary of the establishment of the society in Washington. The new building is intended as a National memorial of the Swedenborgian Church in America. Delegates are in attendance from all the principal New-England States. AN INTERESTING DISPLAY OF FINE

HOW SIXTY MINERS PERISHED

TRAGEDY AND HEROISM AFTER AN EXPLOSION

IN A NEW-ZEALAND COLLIERY. Victoria, B. C., May 2.-The steamer Miowera yesterday brought the particulars of the explosion in the Brunner colliery, near Wellington, New-Zea-land, on March 27. It is a story of gloomy horror, brightened by the heroic deeds of men who braved the deadly firedamp in their efforts to rescue their fellows. The cause of the catastrophe none can tell. The mine was free from firedamp before the men went to work, and the surmise is that the explosion was caused by a sudden inflow of gas let loose by the breaking down of coal.

Of the sixty men entombed not one escaped death. All out twelve were married men, most of them with large families, and by the death of the bread-winners 250 women and children were left

Scores of men volunteered to work for the rescue of the entombed miners, toiling all night to reach them. Around the mouth of the pit stood broken-hearted women and children, pitifully sobbing and praying for relatives who, they hoped, might be saved. So powerful were the fumes of the gas that the men could only work in short shifts. Every now and then a corpse was brought to the surface, along with the half-unconscious rescuers, who had almost yielded up their lives in the work of mercy. As corpse after corpse was brought to view the

As corpse after corpse was brought to view the women and children rushed wildly forward to see if they could recognize father, brother or son.

Undeterred by the fate of their comrades, one shift of rescuers relieved another. Overcome by gas, they only waited until they recovered in the fresh air at the surface and then went back to work. At first ten-minute shifts only could be worked, but later the air cleared somewhat and the time was extended to an hour. An idea of the heroism of the rescuers may be gathered from the fact that more than twenty were taken to the surface unconscious.
